SUMMARY

In response to increasing consumer concern regarding the issues of animal care, an Intercommodity Animal Welfare Workshop was held on March 9, 1991. The objective of this meeting was to increase awareness of animal care issues and to take steps toward the formation of an intercommodity organization that would be responsible for addressing such issues. Representatives from the beef and pork industry to ostrich and game animal producers, attended this workshop. A consensus was reached by those present, that the animal care issue was important and an intercommodity animal care group should be formed in Saskatchewan.

FACS is a industry driven non-profit organization which is involved largely in communication and information activities. A clear distinction should be made between this organization and the SSPCA which fulfils an investigative and policing role. Granted both organizations have similar goals - to advocate the humane care of animals - their roles, however, are quite different.

On May 3, 2000 FACS held a strategic planning session at which time the following info was developed:

Vision:

FACS is the collective voice for animal agriculture specific to animal care
FACS advances the interests of the animal agriculture industry
FACS advances the quality of animal care.

FACS Purpose:

FACS represents the livestock industry in advancing responsible animal care.

FACS Rally Cry

Advancing responsible animal care in agriculture.

FACS focusses on three main areas:

(1) educating producers (2) educating consumers, and (3) educating Saskatchewan's youth.

FACS makes every effort to:

(1) advance producers' awareness of emerging animal welfare issues (2) improve animal handling skills (3) provide information for greater public understanding and awareness about producer commitment to providing humane care to their animals, and (4) support research relevant to animal care.

The money received from the SBDF assists with core funding.

On April 13 and 14, 2004, FACS again held another Strategic Planning session where a number of industry guests were invited to attend and participate for one day on April 13th.

Based on results from the two day planning session, the following three information was discussed and Mission Pillars were identified and supported as outlined below.

The Mission of an organization sets-out its reason for existing. Often organization exist for more than one purpose and in the case of FACS, these reasons have been referred to as the "Mission Pillars". They are the foundations upon which all FACS activities are to be built and represent the primary areas of focus of the organization. The FACS- Working for the Future Session participants discussed the primary areas of focus that FACS should pursue.

FACS should exist to perform the following fundamental activities:

Primary

- Education
 - internal - membership (eg. Producers)
 - external - public, government
- Promotion in advocacy of responsible animal care

Secondary

- Media Relations - broad based, time sensitive
- Coordination of projects and activities
- Lobbying/Policy - policy development and education on the results of proposed regulations; work with other commodity groups (as requested or as initiated by FACS).

TECHNICAL REPORT

BACKGROUND & OBJECTIVES

Over the past several years, there has been increasing consumer concern with respect to the care of animals. This indicates the need to improve communications between the livestock sector and the general public. The primary function of FACS is to address and promote the responsible care and use of animals in the livestock industry through:

- a) Becoming the focal group of contact in Saskatchewan when issues are raised on animal care by both the public and extremist groups.
- b) Providing education and information programs relating to animal care for producers, the general public and through the educational system.
- c) Public relation activities to develop a better understanding of the value of animal agriculture.
- d) Development and collection of pertinent and credible information relating to animal care.
- e) Monitoring and participating in issues and legislation that affect animal care.
- f) Encouragement of research relevant to animal care.
- g) Encouraging industry to develop, promote and enforce responsible animal management.
- h) Soliciting industry funding to fully support FACS.

A HIGHLIGHT AND SUMMARY OF THE MILESTONES AND MAJOR PROJECT ACTIVITIES, ACHIEVEMENTS, PAPERS WRITTEN

RESULTS AND ACHIEVEMENTS

See attached "Project Chronicle" for More Details

Publications

Since 1992, FACS has published and distributed more than one million newsletters and over one million information brochures to both producers and consumers. Our quarterly newsletter, FACStracs, has a circulation of approximately 3,500 copies and is posted on our website.

Educational Display/ Presentations

Education plays a very important role in our mandate. FACS educates the public and producers through media involvement, various publications, meeting involvement, committee involvement, delivering presentations and by participating in provincial trade shows and exhibitions.

Our multi purpose trade show display can be tailored conforming to the target audience. As part of our display, we also have incorporated an interactive portable educational centre. This centre encourages hands on involvement through a question/answer format. In addition, to enhance the visual message that producers care for their animals, the FACS video, Animal Agriculture: Our Living Business and the FACS activity booklet the Really Remarkable Animal Farm is incorporated into the trade show.

Examples of various exhibitions/trade shows FACS participates in: Western Canadian Livestock Expo (newly combined Pork Expo/Dairy Expo), Canadian Western Agribition, Canadian Meat Council, Saskatchewan Equine Ranchers Annual Convention.

FACS Annual Meeting and Conventions

Prior to January 1999, FACS's AGM and Convention was held in conjunction with the Saskatchewan Livestock Association's Annual Convention. Although the SLA was a suitable venue, it restricted FACS time-wise. As a result, in January 1999 The Farm Animal Council provided a new format for their Annual General Meeting. The AGM is held the evening before the conference from 7-9 p.m. and is followed by a wine and cheese reception. The following day a number of world renowned speakers deliver presentations to a crowd representative of the beef, pork, dairy, poultry, horse and diversified livestock industries. In addition, government, University of Saskatchewan and auction market representatives are also in attendance. This conference attracts attendees from across Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba.

This has become the standard format for FACS' Annual General Meeting. Again, our high quality conference attracted attendees from Alberta to Quebec.

Expert Committee on Farm Animal Welfare and Behaviour and CARC

Canadian Agri-Food Council (CARC) has asked the FAC's network (AFAC, MFAC, OFAC & FACS) to participate in a working group as a means to move the Codes of Practice development and distribution process forward. Since January 1998, the Farm Animal Council of Saskatchewan is a representative to this committee.

SACAHHC

The Saskatchewan Advisory Council on Animal Health and Humane Care referred to as SACAHHC, is a committee of farmers, researchers, university faculty, SSPCA and federal and provincial government employees. Its mandate is to provide advice on animal health and animal welfare issues and on research priorities. The recommendations are based on farm business, general public and research needs.

Board Commitments

FACS is represented on several committees and boards. FACS is an advisor to the SSPCA Board and is represented on the AITC Board of Directors.

FACStracs Newsletter

The distribution of the eight page FACStracs newsletter is approximately 3,500. This extends to members, key industry players, and the educational sector. After 7 years, the FACS newsletter underwent a new design which better complements an eight page format.

Cattle FACS Brochures - (Funded by SBDF)

In keeping with the commodity specific management reviews (completed in 1995-96), FACS has developed a series of bovine brochures entitled the Cattle FACS Series. Educating producers of the importance of recognizing and addressing treatable illnesses in their initial stages will provide producers with a more valuable end product. After consulting with the Auction Markets & Order Buyers Association as well as the CCA, Saskatchewan Stock Growers and Saskatchewan Cattle Feeders, FACS developed these brochures addressing common ailments that could be treated at the farm level, thus reducing the number of downer and condemned animals filtered through the auction markets.

These brochures were inserted with checks, at the auction market level, therefore reaching most active producers in the province. As well, The Alberta Cattle Commission requested permission to reprint the brochures and distribute them throughout Alberta.

This year these popular and educational brochures will be reprinted for distribution through the Auction Markets.

Livestock Care Service

FACS together with the Farm Stress Line introduced a Livestock Care Service Line. This provides a producer helping producer service. FACS no longer has any hands-on involvement in this successful venture but it is still being operated through the FSL.

Animal Care Crisis Protocol

In the fall of 1998, pork producers were faced with numerous operational challenges as a result of an economic down turn in the hog market. This financial disaster affected all producers. During times of such hardship, FACS initiated action to establish a protocol for producers to ensure responsible animal management remains paramount. This is the first such protocol in Canada and can be used as a model for other commodities and provinces. Again, this was another visionary initiative never undertaken by another organization.

In 2002 and 2003 FACS organized several meetings (via initial request from Dr. Marshall Patterson) regarding establishing an Animal Care Crisis Protocol in Saskatchewan to deal with feed issues largely affecting the beef, bison and elk industry.

The Really Remarkable Animal Farm

Launched in the fall of 1998, the Really Remarkable Animal Farm is a booklet targeted for grades 1-3. Working through Saskatchewan Education, this interactive educational resource has been distributed to every school in Saskatchewan. In addition, the Western Producer provided in kind advertisement in three issues of the Western People Magazine, generating requests from over 900 people across Canada.

Although this booklet was distributed back in 1998, it still is today, one of our most popular resources. In 2003 we had a reprint of 10,000 and to date have distributed almost 5,000.

Stock Person's School

On May 2nd, 2003 FACS together with support from the University of Saskatchewan offered the very successful Stock Person's School in Saskatoon. Launched in 2001, the objective of this one day school is to address specific issues relevant to pasture riders and stockgrowers, which will improve their knowledge and performance level. This unique one-day school provides interactive opportunities for participants to learn from experts in their industries. Attendees benefit from a range of topics, from animal care issues to responsible use of pharmaceuticals.

The 2004 Stock Person's School is scheduled for May 6th in room 2302 at the WCVM.

Canadian Animal Health Coalition - Welfare Slaughter Committee

Very recently, FACS was chosen to represent the four provincial FAC's organizations on this Committee. It is a national effort to ensure humane welfare slaughter is the norm across Canada.

INFORMATION OF BENEFIT TO OTHER PRODUCERS

Continuing Education

FACS objective is to promote a better understanding of animal care and animal agriculture through education and information programs for the public, producers and through the education system. By continued involvement in commodity and breed organization, participation in trade shows, media involvement, development of newsletters and educational pamphlets and by expanding our library, we will continue to educate the producers and the general public as to the importance of the animal care issue.

Public perception regarding animal agriculture is of importance to all commodities. By being proactive rather than reactive, we feel industry standards will be above reproach.

c) PERSONNEL

The Farm Animal Council operates on a very limited budget. FACS is managed by a management team which essentially employs a part time Executive Director and secretary.

All projects are coordinated under the direction of the board (all voluntary) and administered by the Executive Director, Adele Buettner.
